EVALUATION STATEMENTS

1. SCOPE:

The Waterman Farm Dinner was initiated by the college leadership team to recognize and celebrate individual and corporate donors who had given one million dollars or more to the college. Any gift or commitment to the college (scholarship, faculty, research, estate or land gifts, and gift-in-kind) above the minimum gift amount qualified. The 2016 event was the first of its kind, and was intended to become an annual legacy event to recognize this singular group of donors whose transformational gifts will help the college fulfill its land grant mission. Out of thousands of donors to the college, 70 individual households and corporations met the gift amount. A total of 96 guests attended the event.

Planning began one year in advance and multiple locations were considered because we wanted to provide a unique, one of a kind experience. We visited traditional venues, industry partner headquarters and university sites. The team ultimately chose to host the event on one of the college's farms near main campus. This particular farm was a part of a three-year study to re-envision its use and purpose and determine and how it could benefit the university, college and surrounding communities in the future. A planning team, led by the dean and assistant dean, interviewed several architecture firms to help develop these plans. The architect was tasked with creating a plan for a multi-use farm to house a new county extension office, a state of the art dairy facility, a multi-species building, green houses to grow food to feed the campus as well as conduct horticulture research, and a new headquarters building. See Future Farm Rendering Attachment.

In addition, the college had just received the final paperwork on a 5.4 million dollar gift to help fund the construction of the new Franklin County Extension building on the farm. We would announce this gift before dinner, after the introductions. The university provost recognized the donor whose major gift will allow the college to begin building the new county extension headquarters in 2017. The donor was presented with a framed thank you letter signed by employees from the county extension office, as well as a framed rendering of the building their gift would bring to fruition.

We gathered the event team to develop our goals and objectives as well as discuss the event concept. We began reviewing every aspect of the event including the invitation, program, menu, activities, entertainment, layout, gifts and required amenities. We then scheduled a meeting with the farm manager and staff to discuss the event. The first meeting at the working farm focused on the general concept and plans, on-site activities and event requirements. We also performed a risk assessment. We toured the grounds to determine the best route for tours and locations for the reception and dinner.

The concept of the event that would tie all event details together centered around having dinner on the farm. The look and feel of the invitation, the relaxed attire, an acoustic band, the vintage feel of the dinner tables and the rustic farmer's market food stations all worked in harmony to create an atmosphere that was both rustic and chic at the same time.

Because this was inaugural event to recognize these donors, we decided to write a personalized letter to the donors to introduce and explain why this event was being created. The letter also served as the Save-the-Date announcement.

To follow, we wanted to create an invitation that would stand out, but not look overdesigned. We custom printed our college logo on a trio of herb pot kits and layered them with the invitation and response card in a galvanized tin with recycled paper. A rustic wood border image was used on the invitation, place cards and dinner program to tie the printed materials together. These were mailed to each donor. See Printed Invitation and Program Attachment and Invitation Tin Photo.

The evening would begin with an optional one-hour tour of the farm on covered farm wagons. On the tour, guests would travel to each location area where one of the new buildings would be built in the future. We had renderings of each building printed on metal signs and placed along the tour route. The wagons stopped at various points of interest on the farm. The first was the cancer patients' garden, where cancer survivors and their caregivers can learn about and pick freshly grown fruits and vegetables rich in cancer-fighting properties. Next guests walked through the research orchards where faculty and students look for ways to improve the longevity of fresh fruits. The last stop was at the farm dairy where guests toured the milking facilities, barns and home to dozens of Jersey cows. Donors were able to pet, feed and interact with these friendly animals as well as meet the newest group of six-week old calves born on the farm. See Tour Wagon Photo.

After the tour, guests walked to the historic barn that once served as a grain mill, for an open air reception. Umbrella tables, a bar constructed from an old pickup truck and an acoustic guitar and violin duo all enhanced to the experience. Locally sourced appetizers were served from the university's food truck, while local spirits, beer and wine flowed into vintage-looking mason jars and mismatched glassware.

We rang a dinner bell to signal the guests to walk to the main tent where they were met with a quintet country band, farmhouse tables covered in burlap linen with apron-style runners, vintage china, silver-plated flatware and hobnail glassware. A collection of potted fresh herbs, flowers and greens lined the tables – these would later serve as take away gifts. After brief welcome remarks, the caterer brought two large family-style salads, served on vintage platters, to each table along with homemade dressings in milk bottles. The entire menu was created to feature ingredients that were sourced locally or in our home state, including salad greens, vegetables, cheeses, mushrooms, breads, butter and, most notably, the lamb and beef that were farm raised on our farms and processed by the College Butcher Shop. At the end of the tent, we created farmer's market food stands where guests would be treated to hand-carved roasted meats with freshly made sauces and chutney, roasted vegetables and other side dishes. See Farmer's Market Photo.

The after-dinner program focused on the importance and significance of the support this group of donors has made to the college and the impact their gifts will have far into the future. In addition, to capture the one of a kind experience, they were the first group of people to view the renderings displaying the plans for the future of the farm. We asked members of the farm planning team and the lead architect to participate in the program. The architect took them through the entire history of the farm and the project and fielded questions from the audience as well. See Guest Tent Photo.

Lastly, we had garden bags embroidered with the college logo, filled them with locally made garden tools, a knee pad and his and her gloves, and had the valet attendants place them in guest cars during the event. See Garden Bag Photo.

Overall, we were able to successfully achieve the goals and objectives of this event and are now planning the second event to honor our million dollar donors. The feedback was so positive; we anticipate our numbers will grow this year!

2. IMPACT:

The greatest impact of the event was the strengthening of the bond between this elite group of donors and the college. This is one of our most engaged group of donors and their participation goes far beyond financial assistance. Many mentor students, teach classes, give lectures, and perhaps most importantly, hire the graduates of our college.

3. PARTICIPATION:

The total number of individuals and corporations that qualified to attend the event was 120 donors. We had 96 guests in attendance at this inaugural event.

4. OUTCOMES:

The engagement at this event has resulted in an additional $6.5M in gifts to the college from just this donor group.

5. UNIQUENESS OF CONCEPT:

The uniqueness of this event was found in the details. A tractor-pulled wagon tour of the farm, custom signage showing what the farm will look like in the future, menu ingredients sourced exclusively from local and state-wide producers – including lamb and pork from the college's butcher shop, beer, wine and spirits from local breweries, wineries and distilleries, an Ohio folk band, greenhouse grown herbs, plants and flowers to decorate the tables and tent and custom embroidered garden bags for guests to remember the evening were just a few of the details that made this a one of a kind and unique event.

6. BUDGET:
